Event Information:

To demonstrate faith in the inevitability of greater things (if only because things cannot get worse), Kabinet Muz welcomes Hungarian and British artists in its second ostentatious demonstration of international fellowship and kindness.

Branching out from its limiting initial frame of alliance via abbreviation, the organisers have taken the bold step of linking nations through political disappointment and despair. At a time of existential angst and simplistic narratives, brouhaha offers experiential antidotes and convoluted conversations.

Hosting artists with entirely incompatible languages elegantly serves the dual purpose of limiting the production of trivial political slogans and fostering just enough loneliness to ensure a desperate engagement with new forms of expression.

Artists will find fellowship through music, noise, poetry and art in a real-time enactment of the potential for international dialogue, the cacophony of creative contradiction and the BrouHaha of hope.
